Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

IN far China, American sailors, busy over a bottle of beer, I talk of many things—and one of them is Hope's world champion watermelons. Your correspondent has had lying on his desk for some time a letter from a sailor in Shanghai. It goes like this:

Landon Has Hard Task Replying to Roosevelt Speech

President's Stirring Attack on Monopoly a Master Political Stroke

HISTORY OF SPEECH
Written by President and 3 Others—2 "Brain-Trusters"

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON—The next big political date is July 23. Governor Landon then makes his speech in Toledo, accepting the Republican presidential nomination.

As the game stands now, the Republicans have had two and the Democrats have a horse on the Republicans. The Landonists wrote their party platform at Cleveland and the Rooseveltists have had two grand chances to shoot at it—with the Democratic platform and the president's speech of acceptance at Philadelphia.

No one is suggesting that Roosevelt didn't squeeze out every last drop of the advantage given him by the fact that the opposition took first crack. And no more convincing evidence of Governor Landon's shrewdness exists than the fact that he promptly refused to go to Cleveland and deliver his acceptance speech at the close of the convention there.

He and his strategists are now in position to study the Roosevelt platform and speech, taking plenty of time to do it, and riddle it if they can. After Landon speaks, the campaign will be officially—and actually—off in full swing.

Landon Faces Hard Task
Landon has a high mark to shoot at. The greatness of Roosevelt's speech as a political document has been recognized by many Republicans as well as most Democrats and it will be hard to produce anything of its kind which will surpass it or outdo it as a fighting declaration of principle.

Landon's speech must be essentially an answer to Roosevelt, however, and it is logical to assume that it will attempt to throw many words back in the president's teeth, to exploit many New Deal faults and mistakes in such way as to prove that Roosevelt's brave words can be taken as no guarantee of performance.

The president's stirring attack on monopoly, for instance, might well be answered by the charge that monopoly and many of its practices have flourished under the New Deal, and that anti-trust laws have become more liberal ever a joke under the present Department of Justice.

His reference to "other people's money" might easily be used by Landon as a text for remarks on New Deal spending.

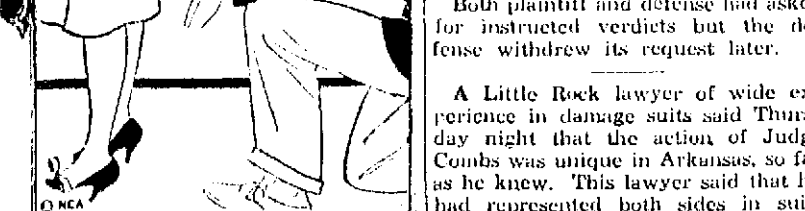

Down in Front
One heroine of the Democratic convention has gone thus far without public recognition.

Miss Doris Stevens, noted American feminist, was sitting more or less up front at Franklin Field with Jonathan Mitchell, writer, and the Francis Biddle of Philadelphia, waiting for Roosevelt to appear.

People in rows ahead kept standing.

Judge Cook Speaks to 500 Here in Bid for Governorship

Pulaskian Recounts His $400,000 Improvement in County Finance

PLEDGES ECONOMY

Would Discontinue Useless Offices and Veto New Tax Measures

Speaking before a crowd of approximately 500 persons at Hope city hall auditorium Thursday night, R. A. (Bob) Cook, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, announced his program to Hempstead county voters, the theme of which was governmental economy.

Pledging operation of the state on a cash basis, Judge Cook told his audience that if elected governor he would wipe out the $843,000 prison farm debt before drawing one penny for his services.

He said he would make the farm pay a profit instead of going in debt. "It's the richest farm in Arkansas, free labor and no taxes—this farm must and will pay," he declared.

He said that he favored old-age pensions. They can be paid by continuing in government and the discontinuing of useless positions, he declared.

He said that he favored the present federal farm program and would continue co-operation with it if elected.

Judge Cook said that he would veto any bill that raises the taxes of the people one cent.

He pointed out that Arkansas owes a debt of $163,000,000, and declared it was a lien on all Arkansas property.

Positions Chosen on Primary Ticket

Little Interest in Drawing for Places on Arkansas Ballot

LITTLE ROCK—With only five or six candidates present and many candidates not represented by proxies, a drawing for position on the Democratic primary ticket Thursday night resulted in United States Senator Joe T. Robinson, Secretary of State Ed F. McDonald and Harvey G. Combs winning top position in the races for senator, governor and lieutenant governor.

The first drawing was for senator and when Mr. Combs, secretary of the Democratic State Committee, who conducted the lottery, asked if all candidates for senator were represented, someone answered for all except Senator Robinson and Cleveland Holland of Fort Smith.

The position of names as they will be certified by the chairman and secretary of the State Committee follows:

1. Joseph T. Robinson, U. S. Senator.
2. J. Rosser Venable.
3. W. F. Denman.
4. Cleveland Holland, Governor.
5. Ed F. McDonald.
6. Carl E. Bailey.
7. Dave Partain.
8. John C. Ashley.

Japs' Smuggling of Goods to China Is Inviting War

Tokyo Refuses to Do Anything About Shippers Dodging "Customs"

RIVER IS DEADLINE

South of the Yellow River China Demands Enforcement of Law

By C. Y. DANIEL
Associated Press Foreign Staff
NANKING—(AP)—Continued refusal by Japan to prevent her nationals from smuggling manufactured goods and raw materials into China and the consequent enforcement by China's central authorities of drastic preventive measures, is hurrying Sino-Japanese relations toward a crisis of the gravest nature, in the opinion of international authorities at the Chinese capital.

The highest Chinese authorities at Nanking admit unofficially that the complications of the north China situation render it impossible for China to prevent the smuggling of merchandise into Hope and Chahar by Japanese and Koreans.

Nanking further appreciates the difficulty of keeping these illicitly imported goods from penetrating into the hinterland as long as Japanese troops are in virtual control of the Hope termini of railroads and highways.

Yellow River Is Deadline
The Chinese national authorities, however, are determined to enforce their special anti-smuggling regulations south of the Yellow river, and to use military and police force against persons suspected of transporting contraband, whatever their nationality.

The Japanese embassy has not protested against the arrest of Japanese nationals caught conveying smuggled goods to potential markets in north Kiangsu province, for the time being remaining content to repatriate Japanese turned over to the Japanese consulates concerned.

Some time ago the embassy expressed fears that use of armed force against smugglers might lead to serious incidents. Just such a one developed June 22 when a Chinese customs cutter fired on a steamer of Japanese register in the Gulf of Chihli.

Revival in some form of the anti-Japanese boycott is another development which Japanese authorities in China foresee as a possible result of the situation. Such a result, state Japanese spokesmen, could cause only grave consequences.

New Markets At Stake
Since the cessation of the 1931 boycott, merchants bearing the "made-in-Japan" label has found its way to some of China's principal markets. Cotton and artificial silk are to be found on the shelves of all leading stores in Nanking. Radio sets and cameras are in use in thousands of homes.

The success of Japanese factories in turning out automobile tires which look like well-known American and European brands but which cost about half as much, had an official muffled echo in Nanking recently when the capital's only bus company signed a contract with a Japanese concern to supply tires for the whole fleet of buses which provide transportation for Nanking's million inhabitants.

In time of emergency these Japanese-tired buses would be commandeered to transport troops and war supplies.

France Ready for New German Pact

Willing to Overlook Locarno Violation for Substitute Treaty

PARIS, France—(AP)—France is willing to forgive Germany's Locarno violation if Adolf Hitler agrees to negotiate a new pact, it was said Thursday night.

Premier Leon Blum, it was added, is ready to abandon the French demand that the Reich promise not to fortify the Rhineland and to limit troops in the region, in the hope of getting Germany into a "new Locarno" lineup.

France's previous government, under Premier Albert Sarraut, took a stand that France would refuse any discussion with Germany unless the "broken law" was first repaired.

While these developments were reported, the army committee of the French Senate decided to consider fortifying the Franco-Swiss border against a possible thrust by German soldiers against France through Switzerland.

Luna Park, Los Angeles, has the first automobile built in the United States. It was constructed by M. Pichelin and still can travel eight miles an hour.

Bouquets for "The Centennial"

Editor The Star: It is with a deep spirit of appreciation that I write extending my congratulations to you and your staff on the Hope Star Centennial Edition published June 28th.

Through your untiring efforts you have given our community the best newspaper in this part of Arkansas, and particularly in your Centennial Edition you have a paper of which you should be justly proud.

Had it not been for your efforts the history of Southwest Arkansas, the Hope Star Centennial Edition, in a few more years would have been lost to us forever.

May I again congratulate you on this wonderful paper?
Yours Very truly,
HENRY HAYNES.

Editor The Star: You are probably receiving a great many congratulations on your Centennial Issue which was an edition that certainly justifies any pride you may feel. Receiving as many newspapers as we do here each day, my sensibilities are somewhat deadened when it comes to special issues, but I turned each page of your Centennial Issue with genuine interest.

It was readily apparent that there was a tremendous amount of work in getting up all of the articles and reading matter in such detail—and your lineage volume shows that your Advertising Department did not let you down. Congratulations are in order for your entire staff.

Incidentally, your editorial in yesterday's issue on the Nyberg Amendment suggested an angle that had not occurred to me before but which appears mighty logical reasoning.

With kindest regards,
Cordially yours,

WPA Band Opens Up at Spring Hill

Band Will Play in Hope Saturday, and at Patmos Next Wednesday

The WPA County String Band, Ruel Oliver, director, gave the first of a series of programs at Spring Hill High School Thursday night at 8 o'clock.

John Ridgill and E. W. Dorman with their bands assisted in giving this program before a packed house. A feature of the program was the group singing led by Harvey Odom, WPA music teacher, and J. L. Davis of Hope.

The program consisted of popular airs, hillbilly tunes, duets, solos, group singing, and tap dance by Vernon Simpson.

Mr. John Wellborn, district music supervisor, presided. In a brief talk he outlined the purpose and plan of the Federal Music Project in this district. Ruel Oliver, band teacher, and Harvey Odom, vocal teacher on this project, were introduced and explained their work.

Persons appearing on the program in special numbers were:

Kenneth Blevins, Winifred Huckabee, Vernon Simpson, John Ridgill, Ernest Ridgill, Arthur Lee Hargis, Hugh Garrett, Harold Duke, J. L. Davis, Ruel Oliver, Harvey Odom, Lester Crabbe, E. W. Dorman, Melvin Dorman, Noel Dorman, Alvis Edwards, Mrs. Elmer Brown, and Mr. Huddleston.

Due to inclement weather the large WPA band of 45 players did not appear on the program. Announcement was made of a program to be given at Patmos High School Wednesday night, July 8, at 8 o'clock.

The WPA Federal Music Project in District No. 5 is reaching some 2,000 persons in class lessons and group singing each week. Persons in the county wishing to learn to play band instruments may do so by seeing Ruel Oliver at Hope city hall auditorium on Wednesday night or Saturday afternoon. Vocal classes are held each night by Mr. Odom in the week at community centers throughout the county.

The band will present a musical program Saturday at the band stand, Fair park, starting at 12 and continuing until 1 p. m.

Dr. Lile Is Joined by Dr. J. W. Branch

New Orleans Physician to Be Associated With Hope Doctor

Announcement was made Friday that Dr. J. W. Branch of New Orleans would be associated here with Dr. L. M. Lile.

Dr. Branch arrived Thursday from New Orleans, accompanied by Mrs. Branch and their son.

Dr. Branch attended Northwestern university at Chicago and the University of Arkansas medical schools, receiving B. S. and M. D. degrees.

He later was connected with Charity hospital at New Orleans and U. S. Public Health Hospital No. 14 at New Orleans.

Downpour General Throughout State; Floods Rake Texas

Precipitation in 2 1/2 Days Here Is More Than Entire Month of June

RAIN MOVES EAST

Meanwhile, 23 Are Dead in Texas, With 3 Million Property Loss

The general rainfall over Hempstead county Wednesday and Thursday measured 2.96 inches, it was reported Friday by the Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment station.

Precipitation for the 2 1/2 days was more than the entire month of June, according to the station records. The total rainfall for June was 1.73 inch.

Agricultural heads said that the rainfall would greatly benefit cotton, pasture, feed crops, watermelons, cantaloupes and other crops.

County Agent W. E. Mountcastle estimated that the rainfall saved three fourths of the corn crop in Hempstead county.

General in Arkansas
LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Heavy rains in the southern and eastern Arkansas were reported as the path of the weather disturbance moved northeastward to western Tennessee, after drenching other parts of the state to break the drought threat and bring crop savings estimated in millions of dollars.

Flood Losses in Texas
CUREO, Texas—(AP)—Crop and livestock losses mounted as the Guadalupe river overflowed the coastal plains toward Victoria Friday.

The list of known dead reached 23. Property damage was estimated over 3 million dollars.

The angry Guadalupe river was two miles wide as it rushed through the inundated Cuero farming country.

Ethiopian War Is Reflected in Art

Italian Futurists Draw Some Strange Pictures for Blackshirts

By CHARLES H. GUPTILL
Associated Press, Foreign Staff
ROME—(AP)—Italy's conquest of Ethiopia struck a blow for futurism as well as for civilization, says Filippo Tommaso Marinetti, futurism's founder and number one apostle in Italy.

The war's contribution to "The Cause," Signor Marinetti explained, was the opportunity it provided for futurists to indulge their favorite whim of "synthesizing" human experience at super-heated emotional temperatures.

"When the war started," he said, "I called upon futurists throughout Italy to volunteer. Many were accepted and had the first opportunity ever afforded to synthesize the intensity of a battle in color, symbols and design while actually undergoing the experience."

Marinetti was a major in the 28th of October Division of Blackshirts. The product of his own synthesis is "The Abyssinian Poem of the 28th of October Division."

The epic will not be published for several weeks, but a sample, synthesized directly from the heat of battle but deprived in translation of its onomatopoeia, ran as follows:

"Towers cannon victory volleys erection telegraph ecstasy tumb tumb
3 seconds tumb tumb wave snakes bursts of laughter chi chie plaff plaff glugluglu glu playing at hide-and-seek sieve virgin crystals flesh jewels pearls iodine salts bromoform aprons gas liquids bubbles 3 seconds . . ."

The "tumb tumb" goes on and there isn't even a comma until the enemy flees.

The Marinetti study in which these milestones in futurism's advance were described to me is a nightmarish sort of retreat. Pictures hang on the walls from their corners. Some of the frames resemble no known geometrical terms.

Dominating the scene is a pop-eyed figure with chrome yellow complexion and contorted purple lips peering from a vortex of polychromatic cubes, triangles and radial lines.

There was about it a certain familiar aspect which eventually synthesized itself and became identifiable. It was Mussolini.

BATH, England—(AP)—Herbert Phillips of Bath is in a hospital here waiting for a world war bullet again to become firmly lodged in his brain. He was wounded in France in 1916 and got along all right until he bumped his head, loosing the bullet. Doctors ordered him to remain quiet until the missile became fixed.

Selassie Calls on League for Loan

Asks 50 Millions to "Defend Integrity" of Beaten Ethiopia

GENEVA, Switzerland—(AP)—Emperor Haile Selassie, his hopes shaken by developments at Geneva, took two steps Thursday night in an attempt to save his country from complete domination by Italy.

First, he asked the League for a loan of $50,000,000 to "defend her integrity." Then he called the Assembly's attention to provisions in Articles X and XVI of the covenant for non-recognition of annexation obtained through force.

The Negus said Ethiopia has a right to assistance from the League under Article XVI. He recommended that League members guarantee the loan, which would be floated by Ethiopia under conditions to be fixed by the council and a League financial committee.

Directs a Verdict Against His Critic

Judge Combs Takes Fayetteville Libel Issue Away From Jury

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—Circuit Judge John S. Combs, much in the limelight recently, surprised spectators in circuit court here Thursday by instructing a jury to return a verdict for Rex Perkins, former city attorney, in his libel suit against the Fayetteville Democrat Publishing company.

The judge allowed the jury to fix the amount of damages. The jury had not reached a decision late Thursday night.

Perkins is suing for $10,000. He charges that he was libeled by an open letter and editorial that the Democrat published concerning him.

Judge Combs ruled that the publications were libelous in themselves and that their publication was not privileged.

Both plaintiff and defense had asked for instructed verdicts but the defense withdrew its request later.

A Little Rock lawyer of wide experience in damage suits said Thursday night that the action of Judge Combs was unique in Arkansas, so far as he knew. This lawyer said that he had represented both sides in suits charging libel and that he had closely followed such suits.

Your Baby's Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

When a baby is sick, the first thing to do is to make certain of the nature of the ailment. For this, a doctor must be called.

Do not take illnesses lightly, as most of the common infectious diseases begin in just about the same way. The child who is listless, frowsy, flushed, and breathing with difficulty is obviously a sick child. The one who is alert, smiling, and playful is more likely to be healthy. A child who looks well probably feels well.

It is not absolutely safe, however, to trust merely to the appearance of the child, as a sign of its physical condition. It is much better to know with certainty than to take a chance.

An adult is able to say something about the state of his health; not so the child. The examination of a sick baby, therefore, is much more difficult than the examination of an adult.

Specialists in diseases of children are compelled to make their diagnoses on the basis of their own observations, helped somewhat by the advice of an intelligent mother or nurse.

Some people are inclined to "pooh-pooh" the help of a mother or nurse.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Sometimes I wonder if children like to be children at all. If we watch them play or observe the most ordinary every-day behavior, they seem forever to be putting on seven-league boots and acting a part.

I offered my views to the mother of an almost five-year-old recently who came to me with some problems. She had been traveling with her son and we struck up a hotel acquaintance.

He Shaved His Hair. It appeared that Jacky Boy was not the same child he had always been at home. He was doing odd unexplainable things, such as doubling up his fists and making passes at nice gentlemen who patted him on the head and said, "Well, how are you today, my little man." And gripping elevator boys by the coat tails and saying in a deep voice that seemed to come from his stomach, "Hey there, you stop that or you'll have to go to jail."

On his diminutive overcoat I noticed a big star that would have done for a better plate. "I see he has a badge," said I. "Does he know what it is for?"

"Yes, it came in a box of cars I bought him yesterday. He put it right on and won't let me remove it. He says he is a sheriff. He strutted around with it for a while and then lost interest. But he won't let me take it off."

It Was the Star. "He hasn't lost interest. He's still being sheriff and acting the way he thinks an actor acts with a star on his chest. Perhaps if you take it off until you get back home he will be less belligerent toward the general public. As long as he has it on it will be pretty hard for you to combat the influence of that symbol. Children are great for symbols once they get ideas into their heads."

And this once I proved to be right because she did remove the badge and a better, quieter boy was the result.

But she had another problem. Jacky was very good during the first meal away from home. He sat on a regular chair that brought the table right under his chin. But he managed like a major and ate all his dinner. The next meal brought catastrophe. From somewhere a "junior" chair was produced. He would have none of it. Finally authority won and he sat down but ate almost nothing. After that he insisted he wasn't hungry and although he went to the table and ate a few mouthfuls, she was worried about his appetite.

Playing Grown-Up. "I think it's the same thing," this lady answered the second query. "He is priding himself on being grown up on this trip. He wants to be like other people and not treated like a little boy. He thinks the chair marks him. For a few days again, without comment. See what happens."

I lost them after that, but I am reasonably certain that one little fellow's appetite is better.

At home things are different. The child adjusts himself to change. But this notion that he is someone else often accounts for perplexing conduct even there. When he plays, how often does he pretend to be a little boy? Never. Neither does a girl. They are truck drivers, cowboys, soldiers, firemen; mothers, teachers, dancers, grand ladies. Never children. Traveling is apart and therefore a sort of play world. They have their pride. To remember may be a boom to the mother who takes Johnny on a trip.

He greeted his wife: "Hello, my little maid! What sensational comedienne have been devised for the evening repast?" Did Junior say anything I can attribute to our child stars?

Mrs. Verb said: "Hello, George, Ham and spinach and some kind of pudding. Junior said a couple of cute things and I jotted them down. But he did something terrible—got that big beach umbrella and jumped off the roof. He—"

"That's an idea!" exclaimed her husband. "I'll write a funny yarn about Rodd Bartholomew, the Lovable Little Bad Boy of Hollywood, going in for aviation, and how they're taking out extra insurance—"

Minor Consideration. "You may be interested in knowing Junior was not killed," interrupted Mrs. Verb. "He lit in that big bulb by the porch. I was playing bridge next door and heard the crash. It was the only good hand I had all afternoon. Too—eight diamonds and—"

"That's an idea!" Verb's notebook came out again. "We haven't had a bridge story in a long time. I'll say: 'On the first hand in a Beverly Hills tournament last night, Bette Crawford, winsome starlet of Wonder-Super Pictures, was dealt 13 spades.'"

The Spinach Story. They sat down at the table. Mrs. Verb said: "Junior, I think you'll like the way your spinach is fixed tonight, and I want you—"

"That's an idea!" cried her husband, and scribbled furiously on a pad at hand. "How's this?—Baby Mary Semple, child star under contract to Samuel B. Darryl, guiding genius of Wonder-Super Pictures, never has to be urged to eat her spinach."

"Interviewed on the set of 'Goldilocks,' he said: 'O fcourse, I do not like spinach quite as well as ice cream, but I eat it conscientiously, in the hope that I may grow up to be as beautiful and talented as my ideal actress, Miss Norma West, the glamour girl of Wonder-Super Pictures.'"

No Move Missed. Mrs. Verb choked on something then, and the cook had to pound her on the back while Mr. Verb jotted an idea for a story—a story about how Grappo Jessel, the leading Wonder-Super comedian, said something so screeching funny at the Trocadero that everybody else at the table choked on the roast ducking and was incapacitated for the remainder of the evening.

The cook brought in a baked pudding. Mr. Verb pronounced it colossal and demanded the recipe. "Claudette Hunt is to be interviewed tomorrow on how she is just a little homebody," he explained. "It would be a good touch if she could give this recipe as one of her old family favorites."

Pretty soon the Verbs went into the living room. The bookshelves were jammed with hundreds of very old copies of Life, Judge, and Punch—priceless sources of many of the mots and crisp epigrams attributed in publicity stories to Wonder-Super stars.

There were two joke books, a copy of "Five Hundred Humorous Stories for All Occasions," several volumes of synonyms and similes, and a thesaurus.

Effervescent George. George Verb began poring over some old copies of Popular Mechanics. "Here's an idea," he said. "A meter to be attached to a pen and pencil counts the words. I'll say that Errol Gable has one to keep track of the autographs he gives."

Mrs. Verb was reading the evening paper. "I see where Sonja Henie is going to skate at the Polar Palace tonight. I wish we could—"

"That's an idea!" interrupted her husband. "I'll announce that Margot MacDonald is going to give Sonja Henie singing lessons in return for skating lessons." He made some hurried notes.

Climax. Pretty soon he picked up the newspaper. "H-m-m-m—terrible murder last night, just a few blocks from here, too! Women mashed in her husband's head with an ax."

"That's an idea!" thoughtfully murmured Mrs. Verb.

HOUSE OF SHADOWS

BEGIN HERE TODAY
CLAIRE FOSDICK sets out alone on a summer evening to drive to the mountain house inherited from her eccentric uncle, LYMAN FOSDICK.

Claire's parents are dead and she has learned that most of the fortune she thought was secure is gone. She owes money to her father's friend, NICK RADIN. Nick wants to marry her, but Claire cannot quite bring herself to say "yes."

The trip to the mountains is for two purposes: (1) to think out her problems, and (2) to search for a mysterious jewel belonging to her uncle and supposed to be hidden in the house.

Off the main highway Claire's car crashes into a log across the road.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER II
WHEN Claire regained her senses she was lying on the ground with a coat for a pillow.

A young man was bending over her, an anxious frown on his face. For a minute she stared confusedly, then a smile of recognition touched her lips.

"Pat Magan?"

He grinned. "Sure, the very same. And what do you think you're trying to do to yourself, anyway?"

"How is she, Pat?" asked another young man coming out of the darkness.

"Guess she was just knocked out for a minute," Pat told him. Then, with a wave of his hand at the newcomers, "Claire, this is my side-kick, Bob Steele, a mining engineer, with a good job—believe it or not. He's spending his vacation in the Rockies."

Claire smiled and held out her hand rather shyly. "How about my car, Mr. Steele?"

He shook his head. "Pretty badly damaged. Front axle busted and a lot of minor casualties. Someone had closed the road with that log."

Claire turned startled eyes on Pat. "Closed the road? You mean the log was put there?"

"Sure. Probably repairing or something. But Bob and I are on the loose, and we'll be tickled to death to trundle you any place you want to go. Feel able to make it over to our car?" It helped her to her feet. After a minute she was able to walk unaided, and got into their car to wait until they could move the wreck out of the road.

When finally they came back she had decided to tell them where she was going to the house in the mountains.

CLAIRE pointed out the road and then told them about her quest, even to the part about the mysterious hidden jewel.

For a minute neither of the young men answered. Then Bob Steele said slowly, "We had planned to spend most of our vacation in the city, Miss Fossdick, but if Pat's willing I'd like to help you look over the house in the mountains. Maybe some of my technical knowledge would come in handy."

"Count me in, too, Claire," Pat agreed.

The rest of the trip was spent in making plans. Claire told them about her eccentric Uncle Lyman, his fondness for jewels, and how he had given the fantastic name to his house in the mountains.

"And you mean to tell me that no dame ever waltzed him up the church aisle and snatched his name and fortune?" asked Pat incredulously. "A bachelor with money enough to drift around the papers wagged about her round face that still retained traces of a one-time babyish beauty.

"Claire!" She threw her arms about the girl and kissed her. "Have you had your supper? Eb, stir up the kitchen fire quick. Claire'll want something hot after her drive."

Footsteps sounded outside and Eb went to open the door. He admitted the strangers with a sour look. After Claire had presented the newcomers and explained again about the accident, she dispatched the Spratts kitchenward to prepare supper. Then she looked rather curiously at the young men. Bob Steele was handsome more than she had thought, while Pat Magan was—well, still just Pat.

"I'm sure glad to see you again, Claire," he was saying. "Golly, you're looking wonderful."

"You haven't forgotten you've kissed the Blarney Stone have you, Pat?" laughed Claire.

"Pat always gets a little groggy when he's excited about something, Miss Fossdick," Bob Steele explained.

The girl turned away with a laugh. "I'm Claire to you, too, Bob. And now while we're waiting, let's go into the library. That was the room Uncle Lyman loved best. Everything has been kept just as it was when he was alive."

SHE led the way down the hall, and opened a door. "Ha, there might be a clew or two right here!" exclaimed Pat. Then he added, "Say, I don't think your man cares much for us, Claire."

Claire smiled. "Oh, Eb's all right. He's that way with Susie and Dan, too."

"Who's Dan?" asked Pat.

"Dan Dallas, the extra man Eb hired to work here. What are you staring at, Pat?"

"I was wondering why that stone block with the broken arrow carved on it wasn't the same color as the rest of this gingerbread stuff on this fireplace. It's lighter."

"It's been there as long as I can remember," Claire told them.

Susie, fully dressed now, but still wearing her crown of curl-papers, bustled in carrying a big tray. "Ham and eggs, rolls and coffee, Claire," she announced as she drew a small table up before the fireplace. "Want Eb should lay a fire in here? My, you'll freeze with that window open that way. Land sakes, Dan!" Her voice sounded surprised. "What ever do you want?"

In the doorway stood a man about 40 years old, carrying a black mongrel dog. The man's forehead bore a wide scar that twisted one eyebrow into a perpetual droop, but the eyes that looked out from under it were unusually keen and piercing.

"Trigger's dead, Susie," the man said, looking at her steadily. "I just found him out in those aspens back of the doghouse."

"Susie Spratt was his housekeeper for years and she never spoke of any woman. No. He never married," Claire answered.

When they came to the end of the trip both young men agreed that Lyman Fossdick had indeed named his house well.

In the uncertain light of a half moon the building loomed gloomily against the dark background of the mountain. Of imposing height, it was a perfect example of the flamboyant mansions of an earlier period—narrow railed porches, and many bulging bay windows. At the right side of the second story rose a round cupola which seemed to melt into the shadow of a huge pine tree with twin tops that grew close to that side of the house. In fact the gloomy aspect of the place was largely due to this mighty giant of the forest.

"It's really two trees grown together, and a marvelous specimen, as you will see by daylight," Claire said, pointing toward the tree.

"But it must cut off lots of light from the house," remarked Bob Steele.

CLAIRE nodded. "Yes, it's the house of long shadows, you

Attitude on Sin Is Revival Theme

Two Scriptural Lessons Presented Here Thursday by Dr. Boles

At the Church of Christ, West Fifth and Grady Streets, Dr. Boles presented two scriptural lessons to attentive audiences Thursday.

At 10:30 his subject was "Jesus' Attitude Toward Sin." He emphasized that "Jesus is our example; that he is our pattern; that we are to imitate his life and grow into the likeness of Jesus. In order to do this we must know Jesus; we should know every trait of his character that is revealed to us; hence we should know his attitude toward sin. Christians should sustain the same attitude toward sin that Christ sustained; Christians who follow Christ are opposed to every thing that is wrong and are in sympathy with everything that is right and good."

At the night service Thursday the subject was "The Church." The church, Dr. Boles explained, "is God's called out of the world." He said that the world did not appreciate the church because it did not know what the church is; also, he said that many religious people do not know the difference between the church revealed in the New Testament and a denomination; that religious people generally thought of a denomination when church is mentioned; he regretted that people had learned to speak of the church of the New Testament Scriptures in denominational terms. Since the church is God's "separated from the world," members of the church should keep themselves "unspotted from the world."

President Praises Work of CCC in Developing 180,000-Acre Tract

BIG MEADOWS, Va.—(AP)—Describing Shenandoah National Park as part of a program of "joint husbandry of our human resources and our natural resources," President Roosevelt Friday dedicated the 180,000-acre tract amid the peaks of the Blue Ridge mountains.

The president reviewed the work of the CCC in developing the huge tract, asserting that the involuntary idleness of thousands of young men ended three years ago when they came here to camp.

"Our country will need many other young men as they come to manhood for work like this," for other Shenandoahs," Mr. Roosevelt said.

what have carried us through this century and kept us together. This nation and this state are still together and our churches and our schools are the backbone of the nation and the salvation of its people.

"As your next governor I am going to let our schools and churches come first. Finances will be a second matter, as they have been in Pulaski county. When schools and churches are taken care of the right way—finances will be there. Don't forget that. History will bear me out."

"Do you know what the schools and churches are worth? Simply this: 'As juvenile judge of Pulaski county, more than 1,000 boys and girls have been before me in the past four years charged with crime. I always ask each offender if he or she is a high school boy or girl or a college boy or girl."

"Not a single one of these offenders have attended either high school or college. That's what our schools and churches are worth. That's why they should come first," he concluded.

"Show Boat" began making records when Edna Ferber's novel climbed in to the best seller class and stage, was like a constant star in the theater movement. Then the stage play scored a tremendous hit in New York in the Road shows swept across the country in a trail of triumph. Equal success was attained in New York revival in 1932 proved that "Show Boat" had the entertainment qualities which did not dim with time. Now the picture, starring Irene Dunne, opens at the Hammer Theater Saturday night at 8 o'clock, after the regular Western program, and again at 8:30 and on account of the length of it only two shows on Sunday and one Monday night will be held.

The production is a musical romantic drama, centering on the love story of Magnolia and Ravenal, sailing river gambler and heart breaker. Most of the action takes place aboard Captain Andy Hawks' Mississippi show boat, with some sequences in New York, Chicago and in France.

The cast contains eight principles in roles they played in the stage production. Irene Dunne portrayed Magnolia in the first road company. Alan Jones featured opposite her as Ravenal, first interpreted the character in a St. Louis stock company.

Those who appeared in the original New York company include Charles Winninger as Captain Andy; Helen Morgan as Julie; Francis X. Mahoney as Rubbeeface and Sammy White as Schultz. Paul Robeson, singer of "Old Man River," played Joe in the first London offering.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Miss Evelyn Briant, and the salute to the Confederate Flag was given. During the business session the proposed tea was discussed, and the essay contest was explained. The secretary called the roll and read the minutes of the preceding meeting. The proposed tea was discussed, and an interesting talk by Miss Lenora Rauton on "The Rights of Secession." Following the program, the retiring president expressed her appreciation of the cooperation of her officers and her enjoyment of the office, introducing the newly-elected president, Miss Daisy Dorothy Heard, who introduced her officers and named her committees. Mrs. C. S. Lowthorp was an appreciated guest and gave a very interesting talk after which the hostesses served a delightful ice course with miniature American flags as favors.

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

ALMOST MISSED BEING PRESIDENT

STAMPS had come into use in the United States the year before when, in 1848, Zachary Taylor, hero of the Mexican War, was to be notified of his nomination for the presidency by the Whigs. How was this notification to be sent? If by means of the new stamps on their letter, the nominee might deem it an insult that he could not pay the postage which used to be collected. If not by stamp, he might not believe the letter worth redeeming.

Perplexed, the nominating committee decided not to use the new stamp and General Taylor refused it! When the committee failed to get his response, a delegation was sent to Baton Rouge, home of Taylor, and there they learned the truth. Taylor had not known the unstamped letter he had refused had contained his notification, and was elected.

On July 9, 1850, a little more than a year after he took office, however, Taylor died at the age of 66. On the 25th anniversary of his death, in 1875, the United States issued a 5-cent stamp with his portrait.

ADVENTURE STAMPS by J.S. Klein

The MIRACLE OF ST MARTIN'S CLOAK

© 1936 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

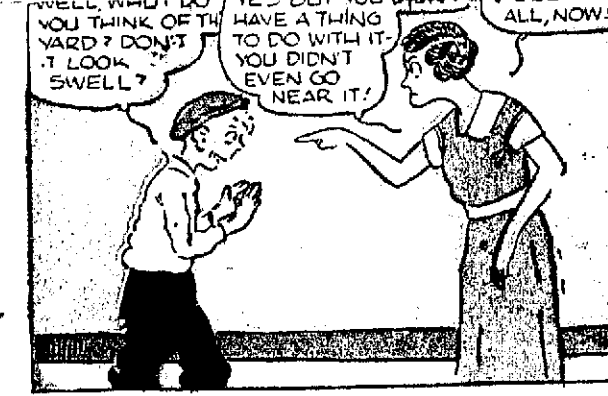

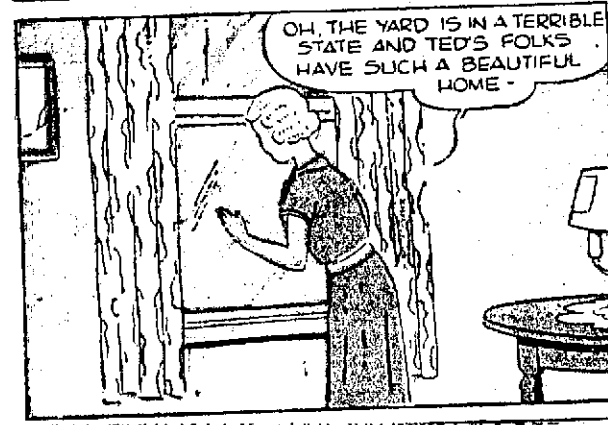

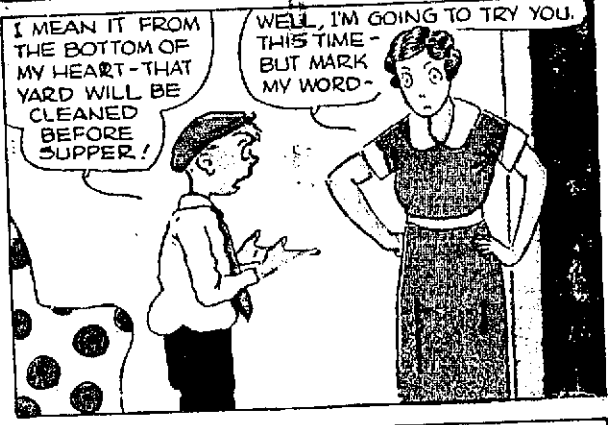

MARTIN, proud Roman cavalryman in Gaul, was riding with fellow officers through Amiens, one cold winter day in the fourth century. Over their armor, their heavy white cloaks glistened in the sun. Suddenly a shivering beggar in rags stood before them. The officers laughed and rode on. But Martin took off his cloak, cleaved it with his sword and gave half to the beggar. That night, Jesus appeared before the cavalier, wearing the same half-cloak which had been given to the beggar. Martin was deeply impressed. He became a Christian, left the army and soon ruled as Bishop of Tours. He worked great miracles and converted many heathens. Today, he is patron saint of France, of cavalrymen, tailors, drinking festivals and reformed drunkards. The great Flemish artist, Van Dyck, painted the incident of St. Martin and the beggar, and this is shown on Belgium's first charity stamps issued in 1930.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

by WILLIAM KERNSON

KILLER WHALES,

BEAUTIFUL BLACK AND WHITE CREATURES OF THE POLAR SEAS, ARE THE MOST SAVAGE AND COURAGEOUS OF ALL THE WHALES! THEY ARE WELL-NAMED, "WOLVES OF THE SEA."

THEY ATTACK THE LARGER WHALES, AND TEAR AWAY THEIR LIPS AND TONGUES!

THE KILLER IS NOT CONTENT TO TAKE, AS PREY, THAT WHICH HE FINDS IN THE SEA, BUT HE WILL LUNGE AT AN ICE FLOE IN AN ATTEMPT TO DISLodge ANY POSSIBLE MEAL, FROM A PENGUIN TO A MAN! IT CAN SPLIT A FLOE OF GREAT THICKNESS WITH ITS POWERFUL ARCHED BACK.

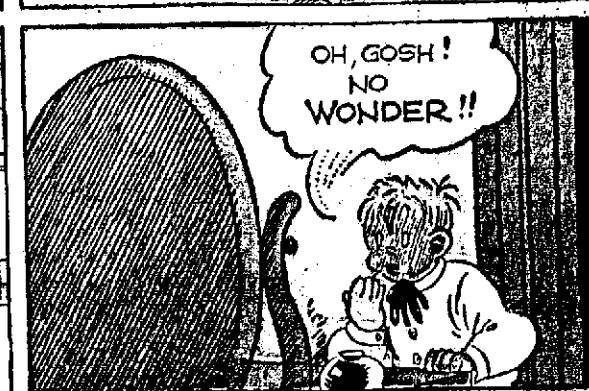

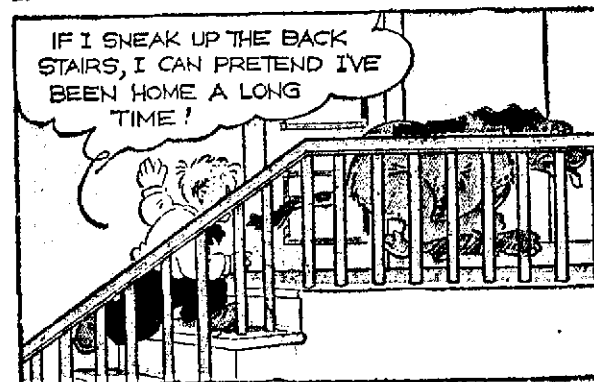

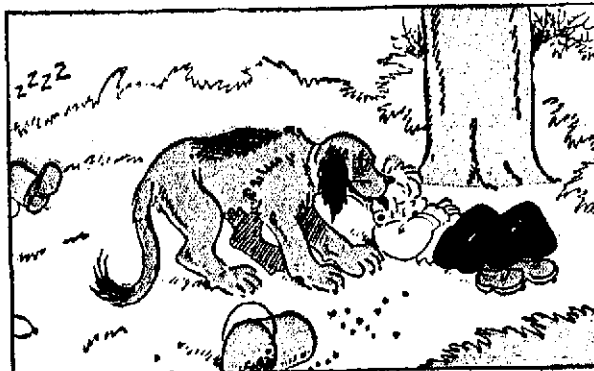

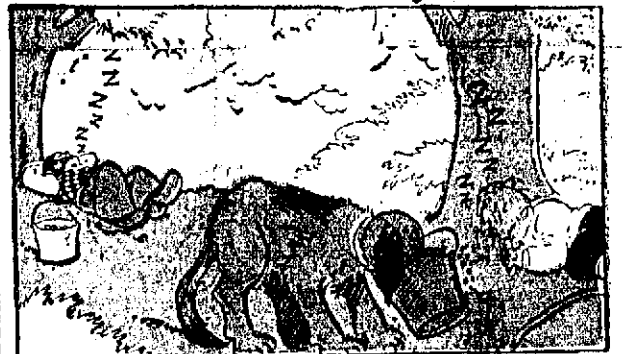

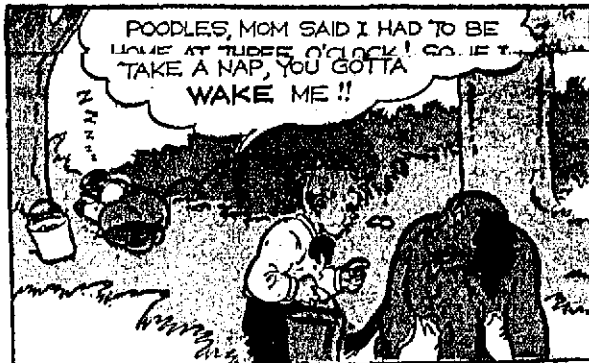

LIKE WOLVES, THE KILLERS HUNT IN GROUPS OF FROM THREE TO SEVERAL TIMES THAT NUMBER! THEY MOVE ALONG THROUGH THE WATER NOT IN STRAGGLING PACKS, BUT SIDE BY SIDE, LIKE WELL ORGANIZED SOLDIERS.
